

The National Honor Societies proudly present this series of tools to help you get #FutureReady. Use these to plan your day, your year, and your career.

MOTIVATED SEQUENCE OVERVIEW

1. Attention: Attain your audience’s attention. (Give them a reason to listen.)
2. Need: Establish a need; show them that a problem exists.
3. Satisfaction: Share your solution to the problem (that satisfies the need).
4. Visualization: Highlight the benefits of adopting the solution.
5. Action: Ask the audience to take a specific action.
 - a. Your action may be the same as your solution or perhaps a smaller version of it—a baby step in that direction.

OUTLINE EXAMPLE FORMAT:

I. INTRODUCTION

a. Attention

- i. Get your audience’s attention. (Be creative!)
- ii. Don’t include a specific preview of your solution, because it could increase psychological reactance.

II. BODY

a. Need

REMEMBER: Most of your time is spent in this step of Monroe’s Motivated Sequence. Don’t mention anything about your solution yet.

- i. State the need/problem explicitly (focus on two to three arguments).
- ii. Be sure to document the extent of the need or problem.
 1. Connect the need or problem to the audience.
 2. Provide evidence and oral citations.
- iii. Create tension (make the audience uneasy so they want to restore balance and find a solution).
 1. Explicitly show how this directly affects the audience.

b. Satisfaction

- i. Reveal a solution that satisfies the need in a simple sentence/proposition.
 1. “This is why you should become an organ donor.”
- ii. Explain how the solution works.
 1. Example: What is an organ donor?
- iii. How does it solve the problems mentioned?
 1. Connect back to how this solves each problem mentioned in the “Need” step of the sequence.
 2. Provide evidence and oral citations.
- iv. Potential obstacles with your solution?
 1. Briefly address any potential opposing views and address those.

c. Visualization

- i. Be sure to use easy, concrete, and personal language. This is a good area to use imagery.
- ii. Highlight the benefits of adopting the solution and the dangers of not adopting the solution.

a. Restate the proposition.

- i. “Becoming an organ donor will...”

III. CONCLUSION

b. Action

- i. What can your audience do to adopt your solution? Be specific! Give exact steps. The easier you make it for the audience, the more likely they are to take action.
